

WHO ARE THE BILLIONAIRES FINANCING ANTIFA AND GOVERNMENT DISRUPTION?

President's Agenda Beset by Opposition on Many Fronts

But Almost All Are Tied To Silicon Valley Mafia...

27 Men Are Spending $16B To Sabotage The Trump White House At Every Turn

George Soros, Tom Steyer, Eric Schmidt, John Doerr, Larry Page, Vinod Khosla, Elon Musk, John Podesta, Ben Rhodes, and a little cadre of crazed billionaires are out to destroy Trump no matter what.

WHY?

Because all of their profiteering schemes relied on kick-backs from Barack Obama and they can't see themselves in a world without their corruption payola!

Obama-linked activists have a 'training manual' for protesting Trump

An Obama-tied activist group training tens of thousands of agitators to protest President Trump's policies plans to hit Republican lawmakers supporting those policies even harder this week, when they return home for the congressional recess and hold town hall meetings and other functions.

Organizing for Action, a group founded by Obama and featured prominently on his new post-presidency website, is distributing a training manual to anti-Trump activists that advises them to bully GOP lawmakers into backing off support for repealing ObamaCare, curbing immigration from high-risk Islamic nations, and building a border wall.

In a new Facebook post, OFA calls on activists to mobilize against Republicans from now until Feb. 26, when “representatives are going to be in their home districts.”

The protesters disrupted town halls earlier this month, including one held in Utah by House Oversight Chairman Jason Chaffetz, who was confronted by hundreds of angry demonstrators claiming to be his constituents.

The manual, published with OFA partner “Indivisible,” advises protesters to go into halls quietly so as not to raise alarms, and “grab seats at the front of the room but do not all sit together.” Rather, spread out in pairs to make it seem like the whole room opposes the Republican host’s positions. “This will help reinforce the impression of broad consensus.” It also urges them to ask “hostile” questions — while keeping “a firm hold on the mic” — and loudly boo the the GOP politician if he isn’t “giving you real answers.”

“Express your concern [to the event’s hosts] they are giving a platform to pro-Trump authoritarianism, racism, and corruption,” it says.

The goal is to make Republicans, even from safe districts, second-guess their support for the Trump agenda, and to prime “the ground for the 2018 midterms when Democrats retake power.”

The goal is to make Republicans, even from safe districts, second-guess their support for the Trump agenda

“Even the safest [Republican] will be deeply alarmed by signs of organized opposition,” the document states, “because these actions create the impression that they’re not connected to their district and not listening to their constituents.”

After the event, protesters are advised to feed video footage to local and national media.

“Unfavorable exchanges caught on video can be devastating” for Republican lawmakers, it says, when “shared through social media and picked up by local and national media.” After protesters gave MSNBC, CNN and the networks footage of their dust-up with Chaffetz, for example, the outlets ran them continuously, forcing Chaffetz to issue statements defending himself.

The manual also advises protesters to flood “Trump-friendly” lawmakers’ Hill offices with angry phone calls and emails demanding the resignation of top White House adviser Steve Bannon.

A script advises callers to complain: "I'm honestly scared that a known racist and anti-Semite will be working just feet from the Oval Office ... It is everyone's business if a man who promoted white supremacy is serving as an adviser to the president."

The document provides no evidence to support such accusations.

Protesters, who may or may not be affiliated with OFA, are also storming district offices. Last week, GOP Rep. Dana Rohrabacher blamed a "mob" of anti-Trump activists for knocking unconscious a 71-year-old female staffer at his Southern California office. A video of the incident, showing a small crowd around an opening door, was less conclusive.

Separately, OFA, which is run by ex-Obama officials and staffers, plans to stage 400 rallies across 42 states this year to attack Trump and Republicans over ObamaCare's repeal.

"This is a fight we can win," OFA recently told its foot soldiers. "They're starting to waver."

On Thursday, Trump insisted he's moving ahead with plans to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act, which has ballooned health-insurance premiums and deductibles. "Obamacare is a disaster, folks," he said, adding that activists protesting its repeal are hijacking GOP town halls and other events.

"They fill up our rallies with people that you wonder how they get there," the president said. "But they're not the Republican people that our representatives are representing."

As The Post reported, OFA boasts more than 250 offices nationwide and more than 32,000 organizers, with another 25,000 actively under training. Since November, it's beefed up staff and fundraising, though as a "social welfare" non-profit, it does not have to reveal its donors.

These aren't typical Black Lives Matter or Occupy Wall Street marchers, but rather professionally trained organizers who go through a six-week training program similar to the training — steeped in Alinsky agitation tactics — Obama received in Chicago when he was a community organizer.

Chicago socialist Saul Alinsky, known by the left as "the father of community organizing," taught radicals to "rub raw the sores of discontent" and create the conditions for a "revolution." He dedicated his book, "Rules for Radicals," to "Lucifer." Michelle Obama quoted from the book when she helped launch OFA in 2013.

Obama appears to be behind the anti-Trump protests. He praised recent demonstrations against Trump's travel ban. And last year, after Trump's upset victory, he personally rallied OFA troops to “protect” his legacy in a conference call. “Now is the time for some organizing,” he said. “So don’t mope” over the election results.

He promised OFA activists he would soon join them in the fray.

“Understand that I’m going to be constrained in what I do with all of you until I am again a private citizen, but that’s not so far off,” he said. “You’re going to see me early next year, and we’re going to be in a position where we can start cooking up all kinds of great stuff.”

Added the ex-president: “I promise you that next year Michelle and I are going to be right there with you, and the clouds are going to start parting, and we’re going to be busy. I’ve got all kinds of thoughts and ideas about it, but this isn’t the best time to share them.

“Point is, I’m still fired up and ready to go, and I hope that all of you are, as well.”

DEMAND an FTC ANTI-TRUST INVESTIGATION OF GOOGLE! Tell Trump To Make Utah Attorney General Sean Reyes Head of the FTC

Google’s future depends on Trump’s FTC pick

Alphabet believes it has a lot riding on who President Trump picks to lead the Federal Trade Commission, several sources close to the situation told The Post.

The federal regulator has the power to investigate antitrust issues and could be a thorn in the side of the tech giant.

For example, Utah Attorney General Sean Reyes — on Trump’s short list of possible FTC leaders — likely would open a probe into whether Alphabet improperly pressured mobile phone makers to install Google apps on their phones, sources said.

The FTC, when conducting an investigation into Google that closed in January 2013, never looked deeply into that issue, two sources with direct knowledge of the investigation said.

A year ago, Reyes, citing new information and developments that became available since the FTC closed its probe, wrote a letter to the FTC encouraging it to open a new Alphabet probe.

Meanwhile, interim FTC Chair Maureen Ohlhausen — the other possible Trump pick to lead the agency — was an FTC commissioner when the regulator voted to close the Google investigation, public records show.

“It is pretty hard for her to be seen as anti-Google at this point,” said a source who happens to support Reyes.

Reyes does have his supporters. They include AT&T, Comcast, Oracle and Yelp, sources familiar with the situation said.

Not surprisingly, Alphabet would like to see Ohlhausen get the FTC job, according to a source close to the search giant.

It would also be happy if longer-shot candidate Josh Wright was named, sources said.

Ohlhausen in recent weeks has shown she wants the position. On Thursday, she named Tad Lipsky — a member of President Trump’s FTC transition team — to be the acting director of the FTC’s Bureau of Competition.

The move would please the administration, a source said.

Reyes is very interested in the job, a spokesperson offered on Friday.

He has already been vetted for the position, a person familiar with the matter said.

If the FTC investigated Alphabet over Android the worst likely outcome for Alphabet would be the FTC requiring it to change its conduct, a source close to the FTC said.

The European Commission is presently investigating Alphabet over Android, and if it finds Alphabet guilty will impose fines, the source said.

Close White House adviser and venture capitalist Peter Thiel, in his 2014 book, “Zero to One,” calls Google a monopoly.

Thiel was interviewing candidates for anti-trust positions.

Alphabet declined comment.

Google and the Obama White House, sitting in a tree? The search giant's relationship with the president stretches back to 2007 and is cozy as can be

- Google employees donated $1.6 million to President Barack Obama's two White House bids
- The company told Daily Mail Online that it has spoken with the Federal Trade Commission about antitrust concerns; it was investigated in 2011 but later let off the hook
- In the 2012 election, the company's search algorithm customized results for Obama but not for Republican Mitt Romney
- Google execs who have left to work in the White House include Obama's chief technology officer
- Hillary Clinton also poached her new tech chief from Google this week
